Proofs of the Existence of God

Dedication

To the human being bewildered about his purposes,
unable to find clarity of insight.
Words that revive hearts,
so that I may live, and you may live, and we may live, sharing together the warmth of the Divine.

Ali al-Qusayr
Holy Karbala

Introduction

In the name of the Almighty Creator; praise be to the One praised for His acts, mighty in His attributes, singular in His beauty, manifest in His majesty, hidden in His perfection, wondrous in His works, sanctified in His marvels, unique in His qualities, the proof of His own essence by His essence.

The Creator of time and space, of darkness and light, of water and air.

The All-Encompassing who cannot be encompassed, the All-Comprehending who cannot be comprehended, the Maker of senses who cannot be grasped by the senses.

And complete, perfect, and abundant blessings upon those whom He loved, chose, and elected; whom He made the gates to His wisdom, the guides to His Paradise, the city of His knowledge, the manifestation of His mercy and justice, the standards in His land, the proofs against His servants. To them He entrusted the matter of His religion, and concerning them He revealed the decisive verses of His final Book.

Muhammad and the Family of Muhammad, peace be upon them all.

Faith has been extinguished in the hearts of many people; darkness has prevailed over the souls; the hands of whispers have gained mastery; arenas of ego-conflict have spread; the revolution of doubt has triumphed; the seas of globalization have overflowed; the meanings and concepts of truth have been confused; the manufacture of names of pseudo-scholars has multiplied; and successive generations have fallen into the snares of false freedom.

Faces appear luminous, yet hearts are darkened, inhabited by doubt in everything, believing in coincidence and in the absurdity of creation.

Among them stands a group bewildered, gathered in the forum of the “Agnostics.”

Whoever flees from one temptation falls into another, due to the forces of “progress,” the dominance of directed media, the acquisition of knowledge from suspicious sources that mix truths, and the reading of what has been distorted.

For this reason, this work has been composed:

“God, the Creator, the Originator – Proofs of the Existence of the Creator.”

So that man may stand as though before the mirror of his own mind, conversing with his essence, and finding within himself answers to his doubts. He stands between his being and his shadow, reflecting on his soul and spirit, and judges with a certainty untouched by doubt, concerning his existence, his Maker, his causes, his purpose, and the images of his deeds.

The evidences for the existence of the Creator are divided into two categories:

Rational and Transmitted—which include physical, cosmological, material, and philosophical proofs, alongside the arguments of the monotheists and the theologians.

“My success is only through Allah. Upon Him I rely, and to Him I turn in repentance.”

(Qur'an, Sūrah Hūd 11:88)

Ali Alqaseer

Holy Karbala

The Rational Proof for the Existence of God

The very existence of things is proof of a Maker for them; and every act necessarily requires an actor, even if one does not see Him.

Shaykh al-Ṣadūq (d. 381 AH), in his book al-Tawḥīd, reports from Imām Ja‘far al-Ṣādiq (peace be upon him):

“I found that my own self cannot be free from one of two conditions:

Either I created it myself, or it was created by someone else. If I had created it myself, then I cannot be free from one of two meanings:

either I created it while it already existed, or I created it while it was non-existent.

If I created it while it already existed, then it was needless of my creating it.

And if it was non-existent, then you know that the non-existent cannot bring anything into existence.

Therefore, the third meaning is established: that I have a Creator, and He is Allah, Lord of the worlds.”

The Philosophical Proof for the Existence of God

Before presenting the philosophical arguments, it is necessary to pause briefly on the term “philosophy”—its subject matter, and the books written concerning it.

We, as Muslims, monotheists, and believers, hold with certainty that Allah the Exalted is All-Wise. He sent prophets and messengers (peace be upon them), revealed scriptures to them, and sealed them all with His Beloved,

Muhammad (peace and blessings be upon him and his family).

The final of His books is the Noble Qur'an, about which Allah the Exalted said in Sūrah al-Naḥl:

“And We have sent down to you the Book as a clarification of all things, and as guidance, mercy, and glad tidings for the Muslims.”
(16:89)

And He said in Sūrah al-Isrā': “And We have explained everything in detail.” (17:12)

Thus, after Allah's declaration concerning His Book—that it encompasses all knowledge—there is no need to seek knowledge outside of the Qur'an.

Some, however, present “philosophy” as a science, delving into its branches extensively in order to prove certain claims by methods familiar to the early Greek sages.

Yet the Qur'an uses the term ḥikmah (“wisdom”) to refer to the science of secrets, intellects, and possibilities.

Because many among the followers of atheism and delusion are inclined toward philosophy, it became necessary to set forth philosophical proofs as well, so that they may serve as a point of reference for them, stimulating their intellects to reflect through the presentation and study of such arguments.

Since scientific inquiry refrains from unnecessary elaboration that may distract the mind with excessive details and redundant branches, the philosophical proofs will be presented here in a summarized manner.

The Proof of the Possible and the Necessary

Ibn Sīnā, in establishing the Necessary Existent, states:

“There is no doubt that there are two kinds of existence: each existence is either necessary or possible.

If it is necessary, then the existence of the Necessary has been affirmed, which is the sought conclusion.

If it is possible, then we explain that the existence of the possible ultimately leads back to the Necessary Existent.”

Explanation: The possible (contingent) is composite and dependent, whereas the Necessary is free from composition and multiplicity.

The Proof of the Mover and the Moved

Aristotle said:

“Substances are the first of existents; if they were corruptible, then all existents would be corruptible.

But circular motion and time are eternal and everlasting. Motion is an accident of a substance, and time is the measure of motion. Therefore, there must exist eternal, unmoving substances.”

Explanation: All that moves requires a mover.

The Proof of Providence and Finality

Al-Fārābī said:

“You may observe the created world and see in it the signs of craftsmanship. Or you may turn away from it and contemplate the world of pure existence, and you will know that there must be an Existent by essence, and you will understand how such an Existent ought to be.”

The Proof of Invention (Ikhtirāʿ)

Ibn Rushd adopted this proof on the basis of two premises:

1. Existing things are invented (created).
2. Every invented thing has an inventor.

From these he concluded: every existent must have an Inventor who brought it into being.

Note: The detailed discussion of these four arguments can be found in Adillat al-Falāsifah ‘alā Wujūd Allāh (“The Proofs of the Philosophers for the Existence of God”) by ‘Abd al-Karīm Nawfān.

Theological Proofs for the Existence of God

1. The emanation of existence originates from the First Existent, who is the Necessary Being in and of Himself.
2. God, the Exalted, is not a body to be pointed at, nor a force within a body, whether active or passive.

God is One—without parts, whether quantitative or qualitative (such as matter, form, or genus).

He is One in essence, not dependent on another, and One in the necessity of existence. Everything besides Him is contingent by its very nature.

Note: The detailed treatment and explanation of these issues are elaborated in separate treatises, such as in the book Dalālat al-Ḥā'irīn (The Guide for the Perplexed) by Mūsā ibn Maymūn al-Qurṭubī (Maimonides of Córdoba).

Revealed (Scriptural) Proofs for the Existence of the Creator

Among them: is the Proof of Creation as Evidence of the Creator.

Allah, the Exalted, says in Sūrat al-Ṭāriq: “So let man observe from what he was created.” (86:5)

The created being is itself proof of the Creator

His creation, its stages, and its composition, all originating from water and clay.

Yet, within this composition of water and clay lies an impossibility (to self-originate).

Some elements are visible and others invisible:

- The heart is visible, the intellect is invisible.

The liver is visible, the soul is invisible.

Proofs of Creation in the Qur'an

These include references to the beginning of creation and formation.

First Group of Verses:

Concerning the origin of creation:

- “From dust”

Āl ‘Imrān 3:59

- “From clay”

al-An‘ām 6:2

- “From a gushing fluid”
al-Ṭāriq 86:6
- “From a single soul”
al-Nisā’ 4:1
- “From weakness”
al-Rūm 30:54

Second Group of Verses:

Concerning the types of material
in creation:

- “From an extract of clay”
al-Mu’minūn 23:12

- “From an extract of a humble fluid”

al-Sajda 32:8

- “From sticky clay”

al-Şāffāt 37:11

- “From sounding clay, from black mud fashioned into shape”

al-Hijr 15:26

- “From sounding clay like pottery”

al-Raḥmān 55:14

Third Group of Verses:

Concerning the stages of human creation:

- “From dust, then from a drop, then from a clinging clot”

al-Ḥajj 22:5

- “From a lump, formed and unformed”

al-Ḥajj 22:5

- “From a mixed drop”

al-Insān 76:2

- “Within the wombs of your mothers”

al-Zumar 39:6

- “Within three layers of darkness”

al-Zumar 39:6

- “Then He brings you forth as infants”

Ghāfir 40:67

- “Then that you may reach maturity”

Ghāfir 40:67

- “Then that you may become elderly”

Ghāfir 40:67

The composition of the human being itself stands as evidence of a single Creator, One of will, intention, and precise determination.

Divine Decree and Execution in Creation:

These include: The blowing of the soul, The determination of lifespans, The fashioning of forms, The designation of male and female.

Alongside this is a detailed confirmation of the appointment of the ruler, namely, the intellect.

And the assignment of the leader of the senses, namely, the heart.

In the process of formation are interwoven: The establishment of boundaries, colors, attributes, lifespans, and sustenance.

The implantation of innate disposition (fiṭrah), The distribution of stages, The formation of souls, The activation of the senses.

Among the greatest functions of creation is the unique endowment

(ḥubwah) granted to every soul,
such as:

Fingerprints, Retinal patterns,
Vocal cords, Facial mapping.

These four are such that no two individuals share them.

The Three Types of Creation

1. Creation by Origination (Ikhtirāʿ): Such as the creation of the heavens.

2. Creation by Transformation (Istihālah): The transition from one state to another, such as creation in the “threefold darkness” (al-Zumar 39:6), located within the wombs: the abdomen, the uterus, the placenta.

It includes the transformation from dust to sperm-drop (nuṭfah), then to a clinging clot (‘alaqah), and then through successive stages until the formation is complete.

3. Creation by Decree (Taqdīr):

Such as:

the creation of a bird from clay by the hand of Prophet ʿĪsā (Jesus), peace be upon him,

the descent of the soul
into the embryo,

and the emergence of life
when the fetus reaches four months.

Some are born at six months, some at seven,
and some at nine.

The Proof of Design (Dalīl al-Takḥṭīṭ) for the Existence of the Creator

- The pathways of the heavens, the earth, mountains, and rivers.
- The diversity of created beings—human and animal.
- The variation within human beings and animals.
- The preference and honor bestowed upon mankind.

Allah, Exalted, says in Sūrat al-Sajda:

“He who perfected everything He created, and began the creation of man from clay.” (32:7)

And He says in Sūrat al-Tīn:

“We have certainly created man in the best of forms.” (95:4)

The Proof of Challenge (Dalīl al-Taḥaddī) for the Existence of the Creator

Take, for example, the soul. It may be possible for human beings to manufacture certain things—as science has advanced to create prosthetic hands, feet, hearts, and so on. They have even made robots capable of performing numerous and diverse tasks.

Yet, the secret of the soul remains beyond their grasp.

The Impossibility of Creating a Soul and the Proof of Challenge

It is impossible for human beings to create a soul.

Likewise, the challenge lies in producing anything with the same perfection as the human being himself.

Allah, Exalted, says in Sūrat Luqmān: “This is the creation of Allah; so show Me what those besides Him have created.”
(31:11)

And the challenge further extends to affirming the existence of the One, Unique Creator. Allah, Exalted, says in Sūrat al-Ṭūr:

“Were they created out of nothing, or are they themselves the creators?” (52:35)

The Proof of the Rejection of Polytheism

It is impossible for there to exist more than one Creator, for this would lead to corruption of the world and all realms. Allah, Exalted, says in Sūrat al-Anbiyā’:

“Had there been within them [the heavens and the earth] gods besides Allah, they both would have been ruined.” (21:22)

The Proof of the Qur'ān as a Miracle

Allah, the Most Holy, says in Sūrat al-Isrā':

“Say, if mankind and the jinn gathered together to produce the like of this Qur'ān, they could not produce the like of it, even if they were to each other assistants.”
(17:88)

Among the aspects of miraculousness in the Qur'ān which indicate the existence of the Creator is that the Qur'ān is a comprehensive book.

Allah, Exalted, says in Sūrat al-Naḥl: “And We have sent down to you the Book as clarification for all things, and as guidance, mercy, and good tidings for the Muslims.” (16:89)

And He says in Sūrat al-Isrā': “And We have detailed everything in detail.” (17:12)

Imām al-Şādiq (peace be upon him) said, as reported by Muḥammad b. Ḥasan al-Şaffār (d. 290 AH) in Baṣā'ir al-Darajāt:

“The Messenger of Allah, peace and blessings be upon him and his family, begot me, and I possess knowledge of the Book of Allah. In it is the account of creation, and what will occur until the Day of Resurrection. It contains the news of the heavens and the earth, of Paradise and Hell, of what was and of what will be. I know it as if I were looking at my own palm. Indeed, Allah says therein: ‘[It is] an explanation of all things.’”

The Proof of Islam as Evidence for the Existence of the Creator

Islam is the religion of all the prophets (peace be upon them), and this is a clear and comprehensive proof of the oneness of the God, the Creator, the Most Merciful, Who sends His prophets and messengers to His servants to make Him known to them, to teach them, and to guide them.

Indeed, all the divine laws revealed to the prophets share one essence, and they all revolve around the perfection of moral virtues.

Al-Ṭabrisī, in his Makārim al-Akhlāq, narrates that the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him and his family) said:

“I was only sent to perfect noble character.”

And the Qur’ān confirms that Islam is the religion of all prophets

as Allah, Exalted, says in Sūrat Āl ‘Imrān:

“Indeed, the religion in the sight of Allah is Islam.” (3:19)

Allah, Exalted, says in Sūrat Āl
‘Imrān:

“And whoever desires a religion other than Islam—it will never be accepted from him, and in the Hereafter he will be among the losers.” (3:85)

Regarding the story of Noah (peace be upon him), Allah says in Sūrat Yūnus:

“But if you turn away, I have not asked you for any reward. My reward is only with Allah, and I have been commanded to be of the Muslims.” (10:72)

About Abraham (peace be upon him), Allah says in Sūrat Āl ‘Imrān:

“Abraham was neither a Jew nor a Christian, but he was a monotheist, a Muslim, and he was not of the polytheists.” (3:67)

And in Sūrat al-Baqara:

“And Abraham instructed his sons,
and [so did] Jacob: ‘O my sons, indeed Allah has chosen for you this religion, so do not die except while you are Muslims.’” (2:132)

Regarding Moses (peace be upon him), Allah says in Sūrat Yūnus:

“And Moses said, ‘O my people, if you have believed in Allah, then rely upon Him, if you are Muslims.’” (10:84)

And about the magicians of Pharaoh, Allah says in Sūrat al-Aʿrāf:

“And you resent us only because we believed in the signs of our Lord when they came to us. Our Lord, pour upon us patience and cause us to die as Muslims.”
(7:126)

Regarding Solomon (peace be upon him), Allah says in Sūrat al-Naml:

“Indeed, it is from Solomon, and indeed, it is: In the name of Allah, the Entirely Merciful, the Especially Merciful. Do not exalt yourselves above me, but come to me as Muslims.” (27:30–31)

About Jesus (peace be upon him), Allah says in Sūrat Āl ‘Imrān:

“But when Jesus sensed disbelief from them, he said, ‘Who are my supporters for the cause of Allah?’ The disciples said, ‘We are supporters for Allah; we have believed in Allah, so bear witness that we are Muslims.’” (3:52)

Allah, Blessed and Exalted, says in Sūrat al-Shūrā:

“He has ordained for you of religion what He enjoined upon Noah and that which We have revealed to you, and what We enjoined upon Abraham, Moses, and Jesus: to establish the religion and not be divided therein.”
(42:13)

Every nation and community had a law and a path to follow. Allah says in Sūrat al-Mā’ida: “For each [of you] We have made a law and a method.” (5:48)

However, the law and path revealed to the Seal of the Prophets, Muḥammad (peace and blessings be upon him and his family), is comprehensive of all previous laws and contains clarification and detail of all things.

Allah says in Sūrat al-Naḥl:

“And We have sent down to you the Book as clarification for all things and as guidance and mercy and good tidings for the Muslims.”
(16:89)

And in Sūrat al-Isrā': "And We have detailed everything in detail." (17:12)

Allah has not left anything unmentioned in the Qur'ān.

He says in Sūrat al-An'ām: "We have not neglected in the Book a thing." (6:38)

The Proof of Prime Matter (Hayūlā) for the Existence of the Creator

Hayūlā is: A spirit not mingled, an energy not interwoven, an effect not homogeneous.

A life reflected in your form, between you and your shadow—
vast without density, encompassing without intermixing.

A perceiver that manifests free will, you in every realm.

It is a light that radiates through your depths without touching, a luminous steed upon which you ascend through the horizons of thought without physical movement.

It folds within its bosom every world, and its secret is discerned only by those of insight. Its origin is a ray from the essence of the First Light.

It is rational, articulate, living, eternal; active though unseen, influential though hidden, an inseparable companion, like your shadow.

Its nourishment is wisdom; its silence, contemplation; its sustenance, letters of light.

Everything within you operates by it, through its command, decision, and will.

The senses and faculties expand
as it breathes.

And truly, the wise is the one who knows his own soul.

The Proof of the Spiritual Sense for the Existence of the Creator

Whenever you are in the utmost distress, such as in the state of drowning, your heart clings instinctively to something.

That “something” is none other than:

the Maker, the Hope, the Truth.

Conclusion and Summary

The greatest evidence for the existence of the Creator is:

the human being himself, and his wondrous composition.

This is what the Almighty pointed to in Sūrat al-Ṭāriq: “So let man consider from what he was created.” (86:5)

It is inconceivable that any rational person, upon reflecting on himself, could deny that a Wise

Maker perfected his creation,
design, and structure:

From the very first stages of his formation in the womb, and how the womb itself functions.

To the nourishment of the fetus without speech, through the processes of digestion, the formation of blood, and its circulation in the body by veins and arteries.

To the divine management of his growth, the breathing of the soul into him, the development of his organs, and his birth.

To the benefit of crying immediately after birth, allowing fluids to exit from the head.

Then the rise of the soul, the senses, and the mysteries of their functions.

The stages of life, and the singular and paired organs of the body.

The voice and its instruments; the brain and its membranes; the purpose of every limb, such as:

The skull, eyelids, heart, throat, esophagus, saliva, lungs, stomach, liver, outlets of urine and feces, blood, nails, ears, nose, teeth, and hair in its designated places.

Likewise, the inner faculties which vary among humans:

memory, forgetfulness, modesty, dreams, colors, and images.

Along with the conditions of age, from childhood to puberty, then youth, and finally old age.

And to all this is joined the structure of the animal kingdom, its bodies, varieties, causes, and benefits.

If man, whose heart has been darkened, seeks evidences greater than those we have mentioned, then surely the creation of the heavens is greater.

And everything within them, in their governance and order, testifies to a Wise Maker, One, Unique, Eternal, Self-Sufficient, All-Knowing, All-Encompassing, All-Seeing—He who perceives the eyes, yet eyes cannot perceive Him.

Wherever the human gaze turns, it beholds wonders in the heavens, their paths, their hues;

the rising and setting of the sun; the seasons of the year; the reckoning of months by the moon; eclipses of sun and moon; the courses of stars, their stations, and measures of night and day, of heat and cold, wind, light, air, earth, water, mountains, rain, minerals, plants, animals, jinn, calamities, death, stages of life, natures, and cosmic order. And yet, the world cannot encompass the secrets of existence, despite all that knowledge has attained.

The Almighty said in Sūrat al-Dhāriyāt: “And the heaven We constructed with strength, and indeed, We are [its] expander.”
(51:47)

Intellects are bewildered, minds confounded, and tongues fall short, unable to describe even a single attribute of the Creator. How can one describe Him who is unlike anything? How can one describe Him who cannot even be encompassed by describing what He has created? How can one describe Him who cannot be defined even by the description of a Prophet or an Imam? Indeed, greater still is the futility of one who cannot describe a gnat or a fly, or even a single created thing, yet dares to attempt describing the Divine Essence. Thus, faith in Him can only be through acknowledgment, never through comprehension.

Whoever wishes for detailed discourse on what we have mentioned should return to the book Tawḥīd al-Mufaḍḍal.

It is narrated from our master Imām Ja‘far al-Ṣādiq (peace be upon him), in his dialogue with al-Mufaḍḍal, where he said:

“If they ask: How can it be understood that He is transcendent above and distinct from all things? It is said to them: The truth, knowledge of which is sought from all things, is approached by four considerations:

(1) Whether He exists or not.

(2) What His essence and substance are.

(3) How He is and what His attributes are.

(4) Why He is and for what cause.

Of these, none can be known of the Creator with true knowledge, save that He exists.

As for how and what He is?

the knowledge of His reality is impossible.

As for why He is?

It is meaningless regarding the Creator, for He, exalted be His praise, is the cause of all things, while nothing is a cause for Him.

And man's knowledge that He exists does not entail knowing what He is or how He is, just as one's knowledge of the existence of the soul does not entail knowing what the soul is or how it is.

So it is with the immaterial, subtle realities. If they say:

But now you describe Him in such a way that He seems unknown, it is said to them: Indeed, from one aspect He is so, when the mind seeks His essence and to encompass Him. Yet from another aspect He is closer than every nearness, when discerned through clear proofs. Thus, from one aspect He is manifest, hidden from none; and from another, He is veiled, comprehended by none. In like manner, the intellect too is manifest by its evidences, yet hidden in its essence.”

Final Word:

Thus, intellects vary, and so too their recognition of Him. Tongues differ, and so do their expressions of Him. Perceptions diverge, and so do their judgments of Him, between a believer in God, a denier of Him, and an agnostic wavering between belief and disbelief.

Yet the foundation of Tawḥīd (Divine Unity) remains: Faith in the Unseen.

The Unseen which belongs exclusively to Him from pre-eternity and in reality.

The Unseen which He designated, out of wisdom, in granting existence by choice,

while leaving free will to human beings,

so that accountability may correspond to the measure of their intellects.

The Unseen which He decreed, in the end, as absolute justice through a Caliph who shall rule the world.

The Unseen by which the people of faith are tried,

through submission, patience, entrusting all matters to Him, and reliance upon Him with respect to decrees, badā' (apparent change in divine decree), and divine will.

The Unseen which must necessarily be affirmed, such as:

death, judgment, Paradise, Hell, resurrection, and gathering.

Proofs of the Creator's Existence in Selected Traditions

Hadith 1

From the Commander of the Faithful, ‘Alī ibn Abī Ṭālib (peace be upon him), in al-Ṣaḥīfa al-‘Alawīyya by al-Samahījī:

“O You who has pointed to His Essence by His Essence, who is exalted above any likeness to His creatures, and transcendent beyond conformity with their modes.”

Hadith 2

From the Commander of the Faithful, ‘Alī ibn Abī Ṭālib (peace be upon him), in Kitāb al-Tawḥīd by al-Ṣadūq:

“He is not perceived by the senses, nor measured by comparison with mankind.”

Hadith 3

From Imām ‘Alī al-Riḍā (peace be upon him), in al-Kāfī by al-Kulaynī:

“When I considered my own body, and found myself incapable of increasing or decreasing its width or length,
or repelling harm from it,
or drawing benefit to it,
I realized that this structure must indeed have a Builder.”

Hadith 4

From the Commander of the Faithful, ‘Alī ibn Abī Ṭālib (peace be upon him), in Kitāb al-Tawḥīd by al-Ṣadūq:

“I did not know God through Muḥammad (peace be upon him and his family);

rather, I knew Muḥammad through God,

when He created him and imposed upon him the limits of length and breadth.

Thus I realized that he is governed and fashioned, through reasoning, inspiration, and divine will,

just as He inspired the angels to obey Him

and made Himself known to them without likeness or modality.”

Hadith 5

From the Commander of the Faithful, ‘Alī ibn Abī Ṭālib (peace be upon him), in Kitāb al-Tawḥīd by al-Ṣadūq:

“When I resolved upon a matter and my intention was undone, when I was determined yet destiny opposed my determination,

I realized that the One who governs is not myself.”

Hadith 6

From the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him and his family), in Kitāb al-Tawḥīd by al-Ṣadūq:

“The true knowledge of God is to know Him without likeness, without resemblance, without equal; that He is One, Unique, Manifest, Hidden, the First and the Last. There is none comparable to Him, nor any peer—that is the true knowledge of Him.”

Hadith 7

From Imām Ja‘far al-Şādiq (peace be upon him), in Tawḥīd al-Mufaḍḍal:

“The first of the signs and proofs of the Creator—exalted is His sanctity—is the preparation of this world, the composition of its parts, and their arrangement as they are. If you contemplate the world with your thought and examine it with your reason, you will find it like a well-built house, furnished with all that its inhabitants may need: the sky raised like a roof, the earth spread like a carpet, the stars shining like lamps, the jewels stored like treasures. Everything therein is prepared for its purpose. Man is like the master of this house, entrusted with all that is within it. The varieties of plants are made ready for his needs, the species of animals directed toward his benefits and uses. In this there is a clear indication that the world is created with design, wisdom, order, and harmony—and that its Creator is One, He who composed it and arranged its parts together. Exalted is His sanctity, sublime is His majesty, noble is His countenance, and there is no god besides Him—far above what the deniers say, and transcendent beyond what the atheists ascribe to Him.”

Hadith 8

In Kitāb al-Tawḥīd by al-Ṣadūq, narrated from Hishām ibn al-Ḥakam, who said:

“I asked Abū ‘Abd Allāh (peace be upon him): ‘What is the proof that God is One?’ He replied: The continuity of governance and the perfection of creation. As the Almighty said: ‘Had there been in them [the heavens and the earth] other deities besides God, they would surely have fallen into ruin’ (Qur’ān, Sūrat al-Anbiyā’ 21:22).”

Hadith 9

In ‘Uyūn Akhbār al-Riḍā by al-Ṣadūq, Imām ‘Alī al-Riḍā (peace be upon him) said:

“The first act of worshipping God the Exalted is knowing Him. The foundation of knowing God is affirming His oneness. The system of affirming God’s oneness is the negation of attributes from Him, for reason testifies that every attribute and that which is described thereby are created. Every described being testifies that it has a Creator who is neither an attribute nor described. Every attribute and described being testifies to conjunction, and conjunction testifies to origination, and origination testifies to the impossibility of pre-eternity. The One to whom pre-eternity belongs cannot be subject to origination.”

Hadith 10

From Imām Ja‘far al-Şādiq (peace be upon him), in Kitāb al-Tawḥīd by al-Şadūq:

“As for Divine Unity, it is that you do not ascribe to your Lord what applies to yourself. And as for Divine Justice, it is that you do not attribute to your Creator that for which He has blamed you.”

Hadith 11

From Imām ‘Alī al-Riḍā (peace be upon him), in Kitāb al-Tawḥīd by al-Ṣadūq:

“Praise belongs to God, the Originator of things in creation, the One who brought them forth initially by His power and wisdom—not from something else, lest invention be void, nor due to a cause, lest origination be invalid. He created whatever He willed, however He willed, being One in that, to manifest His wisdom and the reality of His Lordship. Minds cannot grasp Him, imaginations cannot encompass Him, vision cannot perceive Him, nor can any measure circumscribe Him. Speech falls short of Him, sight is confounded before Him, and the turns of description go astray concerning Him. He veiled Himself without a veil that conceals, and covered Himself without a covering that hides. He is known without being seen, described without form, and characterized without body. There is no god but God—the Most Great, the Most High.”

Hadith 12

From al-Ṣadūq in Kitāb al-Tawḥīd, narrated from al-Faḥ ibn Yazīd al-Jurjānī, who said: I asked Abū al-Ḥasan (peace be upon him) about the lowest degree of knowledge, and he said:

“The acknowledgment that there is no god other than Him,
and that He has no likeness,
and that He has no equal,
no counterpart;

He is eternal,
established, existent,
never absent,
and that nothing is like unto Him.”

How can one advise the stubborn atheist and the moderate atheist?

Advice is the act of the people of affection, those who wish happiness and peace for everyone.

The adviser should strive as much as his capacity and ability allow, whenever the means and conditions are present.

There is no compulsion in faith, for God Almighty says in the Qur'an (al-Baqarah 2:256): "There is no compulsion in religion."

The best advice for the non-believer is to encourage him to start thinking, for this will lead him on a journey to search for the reason of his existence, who created him, and what He requires from him.

Imam 'Alī (peace be upon him) said in 'Uyūn al-Ḥikam wa al-Mawā'iz:

"Hearts are locks, and their keys are questions."

As for the stubborn atheist

The believer must present arguments, clarify the evidences, expand on the meanings, and uncover what is hidden in ambiguous words.

Perhaps one day, a single word will shine in his mind and become the cause of his rebirth in faith.

And it suffices to say to the obstinate atheist what was stated in the debates of the People of the Household (peace be upon them):

If what the atheist claims is true, then both he and the believer will be saved.

But if what the believer says is true, then the believer will be saved, and the atheist will perish.

As for the moderate atheist

This is the one for whom meanings have become confused, wandering in perplexity, using analogy as his staff.

He should therefore pursue the evidences, understand the foundations of the texts, and grasp the meanings of the words.

And the ultimate response to all forms of atheism is this: The created being cannot comprehend its Creator, because it measures the Creator according to what has been placed within itself. This is impossible for the One who transforms conditions, the Maker of the universe, and the Creator of time and space.

Whoever seeks the truth must follow the footsteps of the Prophet and his Household (peace be upon them).

Imam Muḥammad al-Bāqir (peace be upon him) said in Hidāyat al-Ummah:

“Indeed, our words give life to the hearts.”

All praise belongs to Allah, the Lord of the worlds.

O Allah, bless Muḥammad and the family of Muḥammad.

The Exalted ones

The Creator, the All-Creating Proofs of the Existence of God

Faith has been extinguished in the hearts of many people; darkness has prevailed over the souls; the hands of whispers have gained mastery; arenas of ego-conflict have spread; the revolution of doubt has triumphed; the seas of globalization have overflowed; the meanings and concepts of truth have been confused; the manufacture of names of pseudo-scholars has multiplied; and successive generations have fallen into the snares of false freedom. For this reason, this work has been composed God, the Creator, the Originator – Proofs of the Existence of the "Creator"

So that man may stand as though before the mirror of his own mind, conversing with his essence, and finding within himself answers to his doubts. He stands between his being and his shadow, reflecting on his soul and spirit, and judges with a certainty untouched by doubt, concerning his existence, his Maker, his causes, his purpose, and the images of his deeds
